

All about the TIDE project

A leaflet about what the TIDE project is and what it is doing.

Towards Inclusive
Development Education

What is TIDE?

TIDE stands for Towards Inclusive Development Education.

8 organisations that support people with a learning disability have got together and started the TIDE project.

We want to help people with a learning disability take part in Development Education.

Development Education is learning about the issues that affect the world.

This includes issues that can affect the environment, like recycling.

It can include issues that affect people, like hunger and illness.

Development Education is about learning about all these issues, and knowing what we can do to make a difference.

What is TIDE doing?

Small groups of young people with a learning disability are taking part in Development Education workshops.

They will be given help and support at the workshops.

The young people will write a declaration that they will ask politicians to support.

A declaration is a formal letter about your opinions.

A politician is a person whose job it is to talk about rules for the country.

We also want to learn the best ways for people with a learning disability to take part in Development Education.

We're going to make resources that other people can use.

We're going to listen to the young people in the workshops to make good resources.

We will share these resources with others, so more people can take part in Development Education.
